Let us Introduce Ourselves!

High Plains Environmental Center (HPEC) is a living laboratory providing integrated, leading-edge examples of community design, land stewardship, and eco-literacy right in the middle of The Lakes at Centerra. HPEC explores the connections between native plants landscaping and restoration ecology to effectively restore habitat and conserve water in urban and suburban environments.

Visit the HPEC Visitor Center, walk our trails, and participate in fun, educational activities. Join us as we lead workshops on ecological restoration, landscaping, and native plants. Attend presentations on wetland ecology, landscaping to support pollinators, and native wildlife. Work and play with us as we conduct citizen science projects.

HPEC encompasses 76 acres of land and 4 miles of trails surrounding Houts Reservoir and Equalizer Lake. The lakes were created in 1907 to store water for irrigation and have become a valuable habitat for migratory waterfowl that nest annually in the surrounding area.
